The Taxman is Watching

Paul and Philippe DioGuardi

Wake up and smell the fear, says Paul DioGuardi, senior partner at DioGuardi & Company, Canada's foremost tax amnesty firm. Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) may be out to get you.

Since 2004, when Revenue Canada became an independent agency, more and more Canadians have been under tax surveillance. As the pressure to collect more tax dollars grows, any Canadian taxpayer can be at risk for a secret "lifestyle" audit or become caught in one of numerous tax infractions. The trick is to know how CRA works and, at the same time, learn the simple and effective strategies - both offensive and defensive - to avoid tax traps and protect your home and other important assets. This is the guide that every tax-paying Canadian, including the self-employed, small business owners and investors, should read. The Taxman Is Watching delivers accurate, accessible, and often little-known information, as well as real-life "Tales from Tax Hell."

It also:

- debunks the common myths about the Canada Revenue Agency
- shows you the "red flags" that may cause your return to be audited or re-assessed
- helps you protect your assets and fight back
- offers practical advice on when to get a tax lawyer
- tells you what to do when your accountant isn't your friend.

Paul DioGuardi, QC, is Senior Tax Counsel at DioGuardi Tax Law and has 42 years' experience as a tax lawyer, including many years working inside Revenue Canada.

Philippe DioGuardi, LLB, LLL, is also Senior Tax Counsel at DioGuardi Tax Law and a member of the bar in Ontario and Quebec.

"... a must-have book ...The authors have laid out in everyday language just how much power Revenue Canada has to extract financial information and to what extent they can go to collect."
